

Section 162: Restrictive Bonus Arrangements (REBA)

How can employers take a deduction and keep control?
REBA may be the answer!

What is a REBA?

REBA is a type of Section 162 executive bonus plan that acts as a “golden handcuff” by restricting employee access to life insurance cash values for a period of time, thereby providing death benefit protection and an incentive for employees to remain with their employer.

REBA at a glance

Requires the employer’s consent for a period of time for an executive to:

- Surrender the policy.
- Assign/pledge the policy for a loan.
- Change ownership of the policy.
- Borrow the policy cash value.

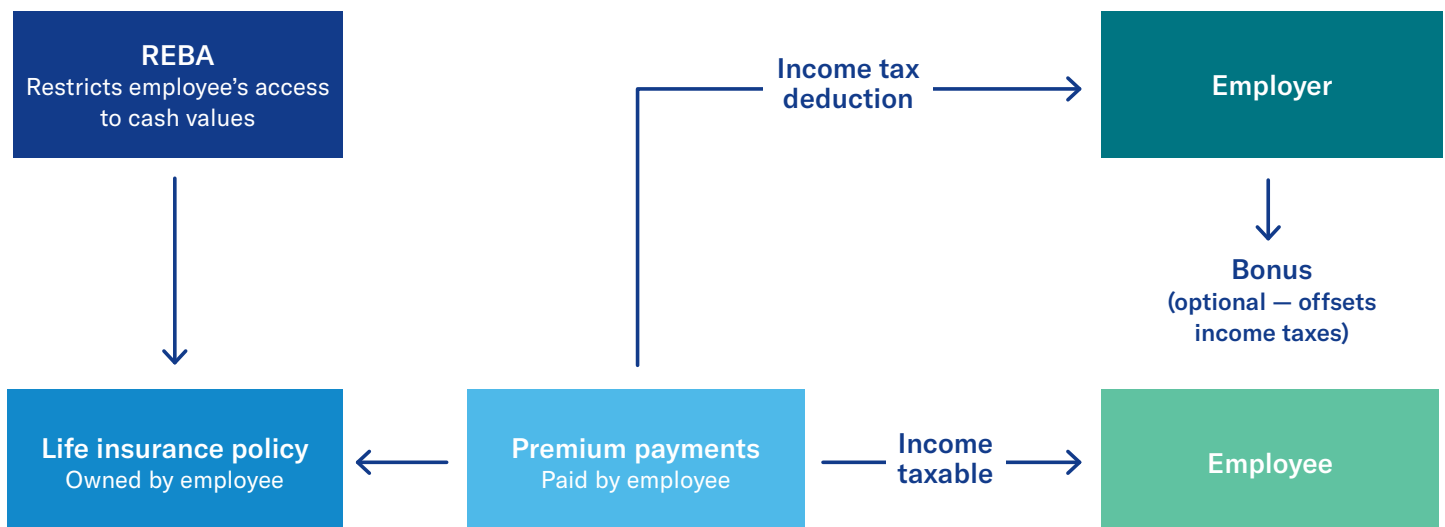

Typically, the restrictive endorsement expires upon the earliest of:

- Retirement of executive.
- Release by employer.
- Executive reaching specified age or working a specified number of years.
- Bankruptcy or dissolution of employer.

Ideal client:

- Small business owner with a desire to reward selected employees
- Profitable business with predictable cash flow
