Understanding the taxation of my benefits

Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider with my life insurance policy

Certain life insurance policies we offer may be issued with an Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider. This rider is designed to provide an acceleration of a portion of the life insurance policy's death benefit as a monthly benefit for chronically ill insured persons who are receiving qualified long-term care services in accordance with a plan of care, and require continuous care for the remainder of their lifetime.

Taxation of Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider benefit payments

Receipt of the accelerated benefits may be taxable; therefore, you should seek assistance from a tax advisor.

This Planning Perspective is designed to provide a general outline of certain federal tax considerations concerning this rider and is broken down into two categories:

- Taxation of Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider benefit payments.
- Tax effects of Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider charges.

What are the tax consequences when benefits are paid under the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider?

Benefit amounts received under your life insurance Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider are intended to be treated for federal income tax purposes as accelerated death benefits under Section 101(g) of the Internal Revenue Code (the Code). The Code provides special tax treatments for such payments on the life of a chronically ill insured person receiving qualified long-term care services within the meaning of Section 101(g) of the Code. For income tax purposes, payment of benefits will be reported to you on Form 1099-LTC. You may then have to file Form 8853 to determine the amounts to be included or excluded from income for the applicable taxable year.

Income exclusions

Generally, income exclusion for all benefit payments from all sources with respect to an insured person will be limited to:

- The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) per diem limit (for 2025, the limit is $420 a day, which is a limit that may be adjusted annually for inflation); or
- The actual costs incurred for qualified long-term care services by the taxpayer (policyowner) on behalf of the insured person.

If there is more than one policy on the insured, receipt of benefit payments must be aggregated to determine taxability. To the extent aggregate benefits for an insured received by all owners from all sources exceed the tax law limits, the excess benefit amount will be taxable as ordinary income to the recipient.

Income exclusion under this rule applies even if your life insurance policy is considered to be a Modified Endowment Contract (MEC) under the tax law.

Policy ownership considerations

The ownership structure of the life insurance policy with the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider can affect how the benefits are taxed under various tax provisions (i.e., income tax, gift tax, estate tax). Therefore, careful consideration should be given to all situations where the owner and insured are not the same person. If the business needs the death benefit and long-term benefit protection, then ownership by the business makes sense. In New York it is possible that the accelerated death benefit payment could be a taxable event; however, it will provide a needed source of funds at a critical time. If the plan is to provide a benefit to the insured employee or their family, a payment from the business may be considered taxable income to the recipient (although it could then be deducted as compensation by the employer). Where the plan is to pay the benefit to an employee or executive, it may make sense for the business to structure a plan with the policy and LTCSR ownership held by the employee/executive, their family or trust. That could be in the form of an Executive Bonus arrangement and by taking that approach, premium dollars could be deductible by the business.

The policyowner is the insured

Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider benefit payments made to the policyowner who is the insured to cover qualified long-term care services, are intended to qualify for exclusion from income subject to the dollar limits described above, with respect to a particular insured person (see Tax Rules for Multiple Policies).

The policyowner is an individual other than the insured

For income tax purposes, the benefit payments made to an individual policyowner who is not the insured are treated the same as if the policyowner is the insured. However, there are also other tax considerations.

For example: If a taxpayer's son owns a policy and the insured person is his father, there may be gift tax considerations if the son provides the funds to his father when the benefits are paid. However, special gift tax rules may provide gift tax exemptive relief when the taxpayer directly pays the provider of medical care on behalf of an insured person.

The policyowner is a trust

In an estate planning scenario, an insured taxpayer may set up an irrevocable life insurance trust (ILIT) as the owner of a life insurance policy to avoid including the life insurance death benefit proceeds in the insured's taxable estate.

In this situation, the trust, as the owner of the policy, will be entitled to any applicable benefits under the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider. If the insured qualifies for monthly benefits under the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider, the trust policyowner, with the advice of their tax and legal advisors, will need to plan to ensure there are no unintended consequences, such as the unavailability of funds to the insured or the availability of funds at the cost of defeating the estate planning for which the trust was created.

Generally, the retention of any incident of ownership in a life insurance policy by an insured or the retention of a life interest in property contributed to a trust will each cause the policy's death benefit proceeds to be included in the insured's estate.

If the insured has other long-term care coverage outside the ILIT, a benefit received by the ILIT might create taxable income for the ILIT if aggregate exclusion limits are exceeded.

The policyowner is a trade or business

As noted above, a business-owned policy can provide protection against the loss of a key person or help facilitate a business continuation plan. Where the business is the planned beneficiary, it generally makes sense to have the policy owned by the business. An indemnity-style contract can allow benefits to be received directly by the business, even where it is not incurring the long-term care expenses. In New York, it is possible that the accelerated death benefit payment could be a taxable event; however, it will provide a needed source of funds at a critical time. A business will also want to be certain it is compliant with the Employer Owned Life Insurance (EOLI) rules.

By contrast, if the owner and the insured person are not the same, the exclusion for accelerated death benefits for chronic illness will not apply under section 101(g) of the Code if the owner (taxpayer) has an insurable interest with respect to the life of the insured person by reason of the insured person being an officer, employee or director of the taxpayer, or by reason of the insured person being financially interested in any trade or business carried on by the taxpayer.

Tax rules for multiple policies

The federal income tax rules apply the limitation on the exclusion of benefits on an aggregate basis for all payments received from all sources with respect to an insured person, whether owned by the same person or not. This includes benefits from both long-term care insurance and accelerated death benefits for chronic illness. Each payer of benefits is required to report such payments for federal income tax purposes on Form 1099-LTC. For your own particular situation, if you receive benefits under your policy, you must calculate the portion of benefits, if any, that must be included in income (refer to IRS Form 8853 and Instructions for Form 8853).

To help illustrate this concept further, let's take a look at an example of multiple policies owned by a daughter and mother.

- A daughter receives $70,400 in benefits in a taxable year on a policy she owns on the life of the insured, her mother. Her mother receives $90,600 in benefits under a separate policy that she owns on herself. The total benefits on the life of the mother, as the insured, would be $161,000. (The daughter did not apply any amounts toward the cost of her mother's care.) This example assumes the per diem limit applied as opposed to actual expenses incurred limit, which could provide different results.

- Now assume the maximum excludable amount for such year happens to be $151,200 (2025 HIPAA limit per day $420 x 30 days x 12 months), based on the per diem limit being higher than qualifying costs incurred for services, all of which were incurred by the mother.
- In this case, the mother could exclude all $90,600, since the amount received was under the $151,200 HIPAA limit, and her daughter would exclude $60,600, since there would still be $60,600 remaining of the $151,200 limit after the mother's $90,600 exclusion. The remaining $9,800 received by her daughter is not excluded, since aggregate benefits of $161,000 exceeded the applicable federal income limitation of $151,200 for such year.

Under IRS Instructions to Form 8853, the per diem limitation on benefits is first allocated to the insured to the extent of the total payments the insured received. For joint returns, the allocation is first made to the insured and spouse for payments they both received. Any remaining applicable per diem limit is allocated pro rata among other policyholders based on the payments they received in the taxable year.

The current applicable per diem limit of actual costs incurred, and any necessary allocation for multiple policies, will therefore have to be determined annually to calculate excludable amounts for all recipients of benefits.

Other considerations

The illustration for your life insurance policy will contain certain federal tax considerations for the basic life insurance policy and will also provide information on any riders illustrated.

This Planning Perspective does not discuss tax considerations for a separate stand-alone policy that provides only long-term care benefits. You should carefully review the basic operation of the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider and the possible advantages or disadvantages of the rider compared to a stand-alone long-term care policy with or without a separate life insurance policy.

This information is based on our general understanding of current federal income tax rules. Be advised that this document is not intended as legal or tax advice. In addition, U.S. Treasury Regulations require us to inform you that “any tax information provided in this document is not intended or written to be used, and cannot be used, by any taxpayer for the purpose of avoiding penalties that may be imposed on the taxpayer. State and local income tax rules may provide for different tax treatment of benefits or the deductibility of charges for benefits. You should consult your tax advisor as to your specific situation.

The company has the right to increase charges on the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider, up to a guaranteed maximum rate. An increase in rider charges may require a higher premium in order to keep the policy and rider in effect.

Other important circumstances to consider

Adjustment to tax limits on your policy

Any adjustments made to the policy death benefit, face amount and other values as a result of the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider benefits paid will also generally cause adjustments to the tax limits that apply to your policy. For example, for guideline premium-tested policies, the guideline premiums will be adjusted. In addition, the seven-pay period and seven-pay premium for testing Modified Endowment Contract (MEC) status may also be impacted.

Split-dollar agreement

For policies intended to be used in a split-dollar agreement, many additional tax issues may arise for which there is little federal income tax guidance. These issues may include, but are not necessarily limited to, the taxation of any economic benefit arising out of the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider, an employer's right to a policy's cash value versus the pro rata reduction of cash values through the acceleration of a portion of the policy's death benefit, and the application of the rules for business-related policies.

What are the tax consequences when the charges for the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider are deducted from the life insurance policy account?

The Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider monthly charges are considered distributions for income tax purposes, and may be taxable to the owner as ordinary income, reported on Form 1099R.

If the base life insurance policy is not classified as a Modified Endowment Contract (MEC), monthly rider charges will generally be deemed a nontaxable return of premium that will reduce the tax basis in your policy. The amount of the monthly charge will generally be taxable only as ordinary income after your tax basis in your policy has been reduced to zero.

- For policies classified as MECs, monthly rider charges will generally be taxable to the extent of any gain in your policy (policy account value exceeds cumulative premiums). As with any taxable distribution from a MEC, an additional 10% tax penalty on the taxable amount will also generally apply if you are under age 59½ at the time of the distribution.

Charges for the Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider are generally not considered deductible for income tax purposes. The Accelerated Death Benefit for Long-Term Care ServicesSM Rider is not intended to be a qualified long-term care insurance contract under Section 7702B(b) of the Internal Revenue Code.
